3) The following real-life example from North East Somerset shows the potential of post offices to perhaps be used in new ways in future:

In Paulton, a village centre pharmacy plans to move to a new location next to a brand new GP surgery away from the village centre. Many residents in the heart of Paulton say they would like a village centre pick-up point for prescriptions, so they can still collect medication from a central place. Whilst it would of course be extremely important to ensure such a facility did not lead to prescription drugs getting into the wrong hands, Paulton Post Office might fit the bill, although current legislation would need to be amended to allow this to happen.

Please remember, this is just an example. But do you think this particular idea is worth pursuing?
